HARD LUCK FOR HOOSIERS

Out of Sixteen Men Lodged Safely at First Only One Scores.

The Giants Outbatted Two to One, Still The Took the Game-Manager Spence Says Empire Valentine Did It.

Special to the Indianaports Journal NEW YORK, June 5. - If ever a club played in Juck the Giants did this afternoon. After throwing away chances enough to win by stupid baserunning, and after drawing six successive goose-eggs, they blundered on two runs and won the game. Four errors, Slattery's audacity, and one base hit did the business. The Hoosiers gos men on bases in nearly every inning, and yet couldn't get but one man across the plate. They out-batted the Giants by a good majority, but luck was dead against them. Think of a three-bagger and a single in the same inning, and yet no run! They got no less than sixteen men on first base, and only one run came of it. This was the first run of the game, and was made in the fourth inning. Denny hit a long fly to right, on which he made three bases, as Slattery muffed the ball. Bassett made a single, on which Denny scored. Foster mused Mo-Geachy's fly, and this put Bassett on third and McGeachy at second; there they dallied while Esterbrook, Buckley and Shreve retired in order. In the seventh, Bassett's fumble gave Slattery a base. He stole second by a daring slide and Buckley's wild throw; then, on an out at first, Slattery made an audacious break for third, and got there on Esterbrook's wild throw. Richardson hit to Bassett, who had an easy chance to put Slattery out at the plate, but a wild throw spoiled it, and Slattery scored. Then Keefe came along with a safe hit that brought Richardson home and won the game. Glasscock hit safely in the eighth, stole second and made third on Denny's out, Bassett having played his string of hits-three-was unable to make another, and Glasscock was left. Shreeve pitched a good game, and Buckley's throwing and catching was immense, the latter catching three men napping on bases and throwing out two more. Bassett's bad fielding and an inability to bunch hits lost the game. Score: INDIANAPOLIS. .

Handicapped by Umpires. Those who know umpire Valentine's disposition not merely to favor the home club, but to do whatever he thinks will be to his own in-·terest, will not be surprised to read the following complaint from Manager Spence. It should be remembered in this connection that Spence is not a man who endeavors to lay the blame of defeat upon the umpire. His reputation in the New England League last year was that of being the best friend the umpires had among the managers. Mr. Spence sent the following telegram to a friend in this city after yesterday's game: NEW YORK, June 5. Valentine is taking games right out of our hands; we had them shut out to-day. H. L. SPENCE. And so it goes. The cheap staff of umpires with which the League is handicapped is ruining this year's sport. Indianapolis was deprived of one or two games at Chicago, at least one in this city with Boston, and probably two in New York by blundering umpires. Base-Ball Notes.

Clark is pitching good ball for the Omaha Sporting Life: Sam Moffet, of Indianapolis. is developing into a great pitcher. He bids fair to equal his great Cleveland record of 1884. Tug Arundel told a St. Louis reporter: "I have played under a good many men," says John, "but I must say that Jack Glasscock is one of the finest men that ever captained a team. He is very kind to his men, but you bet he wants everybody to play ball."

Several hundred tickets have been sold for the game of base-ball between the police and firemen this afternoon. Both sides will present very strong nines. The proceeds are to be divided among disabled members of the two departments. The game will be called at 3 o'clock in Athletic Park.

All last year, and the earlier portion of this the friends of the home team believed that the Indianapolis club was weak only in the pitchers' box. During the last month the pitchers have done as good work as those of any club in the country, but the team continues to lose. About the time the batters begin to get their eyes on the ball the pitchers will let down.

London Special.

The engagement of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the mugwump English statesman, to Miss Endicott is still believed in here. A paper to-day gravely declares that the marriage is delayed for reasons analogous to those which prevented the union of Princess Victoria, of Prussia, and Alexander, of Battenberg. The marriage, says the writer, would be prejudicial to the Democratic party and might influence the coming election, as Endicott is in Cleveland's Cabinet, and Chamberlain, with an anti-Irish and homerule feeling, is not a man whom Irish Democrats would like to see marry an American. To this remarkable piece of news is added some amusing abuse of American demagogues.

Boulauger's Policy Not Approved. Paris, June 5.-The majority of morning papers regard Boulanger's statement of policy, which he outlined in his speech yesterday, as confused, contradictory and absurd. Republican organs praise Minister Floquet's reply, and express the belief that the debate has helped concentrate the Republican forces in the Chamber. The Journal Des Debats, however, says the declarations from the Tribune do not suffice to stay the course of events.

Foreign Notes. Mr. Henry Villard writes confirming the statement that he is about to undertake an expedition to the south pole. Dr. Neumayer, director of the Deutsche Seewart, of Hamburg, will co-

Temperance of Commercial Travelers. New York Mail and Express.

"Do you know," said one of the craft to reporter the other day, "that there are about 30,000 commercial travelers in the United Stat-s? Surprised to hear it? Yes, most people are when they are told of it; but it's a fact, nevertheless. You may also be surprised to learn that each one of them spends on an average $3,000 a year, making a total of $240,000,000. If you add to this their salaries, averaging at the least $1,000, you have a total expenditure by commercial travelers of $320,000. 000 a year. This is naturally spent in all parts of the country, but the hotels and railroads get the lion's share of it. During the last ten years there has been a great change in the character of the commercial traveler. The old Bohemian type has almost disappeared from the road, and drinking men are much more rarely met with than formerly. A short time ago it was almost impossible to get a merchant over to your hotel to 'take a look at your samples' without first getting him to leave his stere on the protext of getting a 'smile.' That is all changed now; the customers don't look for it, and the drummer seldoms gives it a thought

This company was deeply involved and the varnish company became responsible for many of its debts, and was not able to carry the load.

SOUTHERN REPUDIATION.

Another Effort to Induce the Defaulting States to Settle Their Honest Debts.

NEW YORK, June 5 .- Every effort is being made to have those of the Southern States which repudiated their bonds to redeem them. A letter has been sent to Governor Scales, of North Carolina, in behalf of Morton, & Co., who hold $6,500,000 worth (face value) of the unredeemed and repudiated bonds of that State, suggesting a plan to bring about a redemption of all these bonds of the Southern States. The letter, after stating that it is witten in behalf of holders of North Carolina special-tax bonds, recalls the meeting in New York, after the war, of commissioners from the Southern States who effected a basis of settlement of their obligations, resulting in large investments subse quently in that section. It then continues:

Subsequently, new liabilities were contracted and the obligations then issued have since furnished the subject of hostile enactments by the Southern Legissubject of hostile enactments by the Southern Legislaturess. The time has now arrived when the financial interests of those States compel a change in this policy. The radical disregard of the rights of the bondholders arose, in part, from political hostility to the party which was dominant when the securities were issued, and in part from the conduct of some of the State agents engaged in their negotiation. Whatever palliation may have existed then, existed before the adverse legislation, and innocent investors have been the principal sufferers. The sense of this injustice has had time to mature, and the equities of the bondholders are no longer obscured by political or individual feelings. Moreover, the condition of public affairs has materially altered in the twenty years since the faith and credit of these States were pledged to the payment of their bonds. Industrial and not partisan questions are now and not partisan questions are now the subjects of political contest. The Southern States are identified in national affairs with the promotion of a defined fiscal policy. The adoption of this policy by the Nation at large must naturally be influenced by the results which its promoters have achieved in the administration of their own domestic finances. The meagre development of the Southern States is the visible result of their disregard of public contracts and the consequent repulsion of capital. This practical outcome of their financial system does not commend financial system does not commend the views of the tariff, which they propound as the key-note of national propriety. The exponents of a financial reform cannot attain success without the recognition of the force of contracts, the foundation of all industry and progress. There is another phase of this subject which should be equally potent with those who desire the South to become the important factor in shaping the national policy. The Southern States acting in political policy. The Southern States, acting in political unison, bid fair to be the most influential single eleunison, bid fair to be the most influential single element in the federal councils. This position cannot be maintained by a section of the Union that persists in defying the mandates of the Constitution. For, whatever doubts may arise concerning an effective process for compelling obedience to the prohibition against passing laws impairing contracts, none can exist respecting the intrinsic force and moral obligation pertaining to that prohibition. A section of the country which deliberately nullifies the Constitution cannot successfully aspire to dominate the national administration. No nation has ever permitted such a practical satire upon its own institutions. practical satire upon its own institutions.

The letter then suggests that the Governor of each defaulting State send a representative to New York to meet a representative of the bond-holders, and that the President be asked to appoint a delegate to represent the holdings of the United States, and that a board of arbitration be chosen to award fair terms for refunding, subject to approval by the States interested.

KAISER WILHELM'S WIDOW. The Venerable Empress Watching Her Little

Great-Grandchildren at Play. Bellevue Castle, on the outskirts of Berlin, has again become the favorite resort of members of the royal family. The aged dowager Empress takes her daily walks there. There seems little life in the the tottering gait, little vitality in the wrinkled, careworn face. Yet her vitality is still boundless, and no man has taken her portrait for over thirty years, a fact which explains the surprice of foreigners who purchase groups of the imperial family and find the hoary widow looking younger than the present Empress Victoria. Near the dowager Empress, on her afternoon walks, is another picture which is in bright contrast to her and often engages her Majesty's attention-the frolics of her great-grandchildren A part of the park has been laid out for their use, and here, true to the Hohenzollern blood they play "soldiers in peace." The eldest, in the days of some future Bismarck, now six years old, is commander-in-chief, and fully impressed with the importance of his position. A few days ago he asked his mother to have a fort built for his amusement, but was compelled to content himself with a guard-house instead. Here he orders one of his brothers to stand watch, salute him as he passes with the little wooden gun in regular military fashion, and relieves him after duty by brother No. 2. At other times he drills them and, dressed in his miniature uniform, demands unconditional obsdience on the part of the junior princes. It is amusing to see the perfection with which the commands are executed and hear the sonorous sopranoof the commander-in-chief, the highsounding language when a stomach is too far forward or a foot out of place at "right, dress!" The youngest boy is just out of the cradle; still he toddles about in his own peculiar way, and gives promise of a future leader. The father appears among them often, and takes command degrading the eldest son to the ranks for the time being. But this he accepts with pride, desirous to show his own proficiency. He will be well-drilled at the age of ten, when all royal princes receive the rank of first lieutenant. Then his command will be genuine.

AN ADVANCE PROPHET COMING. The Advocate of a New Religion on the Way | T. C. Clark, in Scribner's Magazine. to New York.

London Spacial. Lawrence Oliphant, who sailed for New York last Saturday, is the advance prophet of a new religion. Oliphant has had a remarkable career. He has occupied one of the highest places in English society. As the author of a satirical society novel of "Piccadilly" he is well known in the United States. He has been a traveler who has teen in every country, and as a hunter, adventurer and keen observer has written many delightful works. After years of adventurous wanderings he settled in London and became a member of Parliament for Stirlingburgs. His family name, literary reputation and great abilities made him eagerly welcomed everywhere. The most brilliant career was before him, when, without a word of warning, he resigned his seat in Parliament and disappeared. When he was next heard of he was working as a day laborer in a community of religious communists in South America. From years of probation there Oliphant graduated to a high position in the new religion. He married a woman who believed as he did. The two retired to Syria to prepare a new book of revelations, but Mrs. Oliphant died before the work was done. Upon the heights near their summer cottage, at Halifax, Oliphant built a temple, where he says he lived in communication with his wife's spirit until this book of later revelations was completed. This book is now upon the eve of publication, in London, and, it is understood, will be out in New York soon after his arrival in that city.

THE BONANZA PARTNERS. Vivid Illustrations of the Vicissitudes of Speculative Careers.

San Francisco Chronicle. The news that J. C. Flood bad withdrawn from an active part in the management of the Nevada Bank on Thursday furnished an interesting topic for Pine street yesterday. Mr. Flood had been talking for some time of going to Europe for the tenefit of his bealth, which has been very poor for the year past. The complicated condition of his business, however, interfered with the contemplated tour. The disastrious wheat deal of last year, by which the bonanza banker lost some $10,000,000, had left a vast amount of financial complications. The new building on Market street did not obtain tenants as quickly as anticipated. The Nevada Bank needed attention, and Mr. Flood was loath to see the institution that had made him such a power on Pine street pass into the complete control of strangers. Gradually, however, the ex-banker's affairs have assumed a more satisfactory shape. The wheat deal has been settled and all accounts balanced. Not a cent of the obligations is now owed by the bank. The new building on Market street is filling up and promises soon to become another pledge of the growing importance of San Francisco's largest

The management of the Nevada Bank bas lowever, passed away from the control of Mr. Flood, and men who had hardly any share in its foundation will, in the near future at least, diect its business within new lines. Senator Fair's holdings in lands and securities are so large and his yearly income so enormous that it kut ne modiq not temsin at the ne the Nevada Bank. The Senator's brief experience as a banker has evidently created an artificial taste for that calling, and he will remain at the head of the Pine street establishment The Senator is essentially a money-maker, and be sees a chance to put a small investment to good profit in the Nevada Bank.

confidence in the cool judgment of Mr. Davis, and the latter thinks that Senator Fair makes a very safe, cautious and successful bank president. The bank, it is understood, will be conducted on a strictly conservative plan, and further changes in the board of directors are predicted. The relations of Senator Fair and Mr. Mackay have not been overcordial for some years past, and with Mr. Flood retired from business the ultimate withdrawal of Mr. Mackay as well would not occasion surprise in banking and speculative circles. Meantime the influence of Senator Fair and his associate, Mr. Davis, will dominate the institution, and judging by the past career of these gentlemen the bank will be run to make money.

There are those who predict that in the course of time the Senator and his colleague will see that it is to their financial advantage to transfer the bank to some younger management. For the present their purpose is to make the bank a commercial one of acknowledged stability, and if they succeed in that, being men of age as well as fortune, it may be more agreeable to sell out at a handsome profit on their investment than to remain in harness until, like Mr. Flood, a cessation of business activity and troubles become an imperative necessity. Whatever speculation Senator Fair and Mr. Davis may have in view, their present ambition is acknowledged to be the running of a successful commercial bank.

Many strange things have happened on Pine strest, but few more remarkable than the present condition of affairs in the Nevada Bank. Three years ago it seemed as unlikely that Senator Fair, after being forced out of the Nevada Bank by his old partners, would become its chief manager, as that he should be elected President of the United States. The ups and downs of financiers could not be more strongly illustrated than by the present accession of Fair to the president's deek in the bank and the complete retirement of Flood from the scenes of his business triumphs and disappointments.

BUILDING A RAILWAY.

Spanning an Empire-How Ten Thousand Railroad Men Captured the Northwest.

The Manitoba system was extended last year through Dakota and Montana a distance of 545 miles. A small army of 10,000 men with about 3,500 teams, commanded by Gen. D. C. Shepard. of St. Paul, a veteran engineer and con-tractor, did it all between April 2 and Oct. 19, 1887. All materials and subsistence had to be hauled to the front from the base of supplies. The army slept in its own tents, shanties and cars. The grading was cast up from the side ditches, sometimes by carts, and sometimes by the digging machine.

Everything was done with military organization, except that what was left behind was a railway and not earthwork lines of defense. Assuming that this railway, ready for its equipment, cost $15,000 per mile, or $8,175,000, and if it be true, as statisticians tell us, that every dollar expended in building railways in a new country adds ten to the value of the land and other property, then this six months' cam-paign shows a solid increase of the wealth of our country of over eighty millions of dollars. Had it been necessary for our government to keep an army of observation of the same size on the Canadian frontier, there would have been a dead loss of over eight millions of dollars, and the only result would have been a slight reduction of the treasury surplus.

It must be remembered that this railway was built after the American system; when the rails were laid, so as to carry trains, it was not much more than half finished; the track had to be ballasted, the temporary wooden structures replaced by stone and iron, and many buildings and miles of sidings were yet to be constructed. But it began to earn money from the very day the last rail was laid, and out of its earnings, and the credit thereby acquired, it will complete itself.
